

In the town there are pretty shops and very simple restaurants.

The clearing is overlooked by the Pelée Mountain which is famous for the violent eruption of 1902.

More than an eruption, as we commonly consider it, it was a real explosion: the mountain blew very rapidly.

Many ships sank then and it's not difficult to find one of those wrecks that still lay on the seabed.

It is now remembered like the Pompeii of America for the destructive explosion which took place after some days during which there were rumblings, sulphur whiffs, snakes and ants invasions were ignored by the authorities

The constructions were destroyed and the victims were 30000, almost all Europeans that here lived.

The destiny wanted that the only survivor was a prisoner who remained 4 days under the ruins of the jail and who was called "the survivor of St. Pierre" all his life long..

During the following years life resumed and the tourism increased. The rum's factory is to be visited.
