

This marvellous and strategic Caribbean location, characterised by thick and impenetrable vegetation, proved to be ideal for the shooting of some scenes of the film The Pirates of the Caribbean.

Two small restaurants face the bay and if you give in the insisting invitations of the “boat boys”, you can penetrate in the inland for about one kilometre and reach a splendid water fall, in an unforgettable fresh oasis.

Constructions and furnishing of the film set can still be seen: a destination that cannot be missed if travelling on sailing boat towards the Grenadines.
