

This small bay, framed by the hills, is almost always deserted and scarcely frequented by tourists because wind makes access difficult: only the locals practice fishing, paying anyhow utmost attention to the coral heads that border the beach.